IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, 29 AUGUST 1863.

THE despatch addressed to the Futai by the Consuls of the several Treaty Powers, requiring him to withdraw his offer of Tls. 3,000 for the assassination of Burgevine, reached us too late for comment in our last issue. We regret that, instead of being able to announce that His Excellency has complied with the requisition, we have to record a decided refusal. On the ground that such a measure as procuring Burgevine's removal by assassination would be rather a meritorious act of policy than a crime, in a Chinese point of view, it may be possible to find some excuse for the issue of the proclamation designed to bring about that result. When penning it, too, he may, by that involved process of reasoning, in which the Chinese have shown themselves peculiar adepts, have arrived at the conclusion that procuring the assassination of a foreigner was not a contravention of treaties, which only stipulate that delinquent foreigners shall be surrendered to their Consuls for trial, instead of being held amenable to Chinese law. In the present instance, there would be no trial and therefore no blame could attach to him for not surrendering Burgevine to his Consul; and the former though killed by his means, would not have been judicially killed. That His Excellency calculated on extricating himself from any difficulty to which the fulfilment of the design of the proclamation might give rise, by some such specious train of reasoning, is highly probable; and in fact it would have puzzled the most able Oxonian logician to produce a more plausible defence of an utterly indefensible measure, than His Excellency's letter, which, together with the remonstrance that called it forth, will be found in another column. On a superficial reading, it seems almost to prove that he has acted straightforwardly; that he has not infringed on treaty stipulations; that he has done nothing which could for a moment authorise the inference that he desired Burgevine's murder, and that, in fact, he is justified in considering himself aggrieved by the accusations brought against him. But when examined more closely, the total absence of foundation to this elegant super-structure becomes apparent. Hardly a single position is tenable. The Futai is undeniably correct in asserting that the treaty does not specify by whom particular "foreigners who have been made Chinese Officers and have transgressed Chinese law should be judged." But it does not do so, because it asserts the broad principle that all foreigners committing offences on Chinese soil shall be delivered over to their Consuls for punishment, without regard to their crime. The fact of Burgevine having "consented to become a Chinese Mandarin and a General in the Army" does not de-nationalise him; nor does it at all follow, as the Futai assumes, that because he has become an insurgent he cannot be regarded as an American citizen. His citizenship is no more affected by his joining the Rebels than it was by his service as an Imperialist. His Excellency goes rather beyond his ken when he attempts to draw parallels between Chinese and American customs; it may enlighten him to be told that a subject of any foreign power caught fighting in the Southern ranks would not be executed; and that, however dangerous his presence in those ranks might be, the North would not offer £1,000 for his assassination. His Excellency made a false step and created an argument against himself, when attempting to argue on civilised principles, of which he merely succeeds in showing himself profoundly ignorant. He will do wisely in future, to confine himself to the practices of his own country and to base his arguments on them alone. The foundation is narrow, it is true; but his mental view is too limited to comprehend a broader one. The astuteness of the reasoning in his third paragraph commands profound admiration. He had a very awkward point to deal with. By attacking it boldly, he would have incurred considerable risk, metaphorically speaking, of "flooring" himself; but he could not avoid it, so was constrained to round it; and the ability with which he does this is admirable. Doubtless, Burgevine would resist an attempt to arrest him, and therefore fighting would be necessary to achieve the object; but his death would hardly be a matter of necessity, though it would wonderfully simplify matters, and especially would relieve the Futai from the disagreeable necessity of giving him up to the American Consul to be judged. But His Excellency did not in the least desire his death; only, had he not mentioned that he would give Tls. 3,000 for him dead, equally as alive, his conscience would not have allowed him to do so. It would not have been Burgevine which would have been brought him; it would have been Burgevine's body. In fact, His Excellency found it necessary to insert the word "dead" to protect himself against his own too argumentative mind, which would have overlooked the fact that the removal of Burgevine from the rebel ranks was the object to be attained, and against his will have led him into a train of reasoning which would have resulted in a conviction that he was not justified in paying Tls. 3,000 for what was not Burgevine, but merely had been Burgevine. We give His Excellency every credit for the precaution he took to insure his own honesty; but are still rather at a loss to understand how "a cannon" should be brought into play by one of Burgevine's own men, to whom the proclamation is specially addressed, in effecting his arrest. We concede that the Futai has done all in his power to set our "hearts at rest;" and also that his proclamation "was not adapted to excite surprise." No act of treachery by a Chinese should do so.

But His Excellency Lee Hung Chang was not satisfied with this indirect encroachment on treaty provisions. To prove that offering a reward for the murder of a European was quite a different thing from executing him judicially was easy. But it is difficult to conceive how he can excuse the utter disregard of treaty stipulations shewn in the following dispatch—

The Taotai has received the following communication from the Futai for transmission to the foreign Consuls.

Major Gordon reports that three foreigners arrested by him, have been sent under the charge of Shenwan-piao to be delivered up to the Futai. These men were found committing outrages of various kinds at Liu-chin-pan and Pa-chen. According to Chinese law, these men should pay the penalty of their crimes. But as they are foreigners, they have been given up to their Consuls for punishment. If the Consuls will not adequately punish them, but on the contrary suffer them to be liberated, the people will be filled with apprehension. Moreover, if such be the case, I the Futai, direct that in future, should such acts as these men have been guilty of (murder and robbery) be again perpetrated, the criminals be arrested and punished by Chinese law, without reference to their Consuls. Thus, the minds of the people will be tranquillized.

The above measures will be strictly carried out.

An effusion which shews such utter disregard of existing obligations cannot be passed over without notice. We are not aware whether the several Consuls have yet taken any action in the matter; but presume not, as, if any collective protest had been drawn up, it would probably have been made public. After his refusal to withdraw the proclamation relative to Burgevine, it is useless to expect that the Futai will prove more amenable to reason in the present instance. The protest by the Consuls will only be a formal prelude to more vigorous remonstrance by the representatives of their several nationalities at the Court of Pekin. Even were it possible that a proclamation, which only indirectly affects a principle so necessary to the safety of residents in China as that of the surrender of foreign criminals for trial by their own Consul, could be overlooked, to avert risk of collision with the Chinese government, the expression by one of its highest officers of a deliberate determination to ignore that principle, in opposition to the express stipulation of the treaties which have been entered into, cannot be allowed to rest until it has been equally formally retracted. Sir Frederick Bruce and his colleagues will, of course, require that the Futai shall be compelled to withdraw both the documents which he has so rashly issued, and to notify that he has found a change in policy desirable. If he escape with this humiliation, he may consider himself fortunate. Instant removal and disgrace would be the mildest punishment a European official would incur, who should dare, thus, on his own responsibility to announce an intention of acting in opposition to the treaty obligations undertaken by his sovereign. They manage these matters differently in China; but even a Chinese government can hardly fail to see that a Governor who has incurred so much odium and mistrust from all foreigners at Shanghai, can never fully regain their confidence; and, therefore, that it would be advisable to replace him by a wiser and, if possible, a better man.

Since writing the above, we have received for publication in our Chinese issue, the Notification by the English Consul, of which we append a translation.

The English Consul MARKHAM issues a Notification:—

WHEREAS I have learned that a Notification purporting to be official has been published in the Chinese Newspaper, to the effect that the Futai has given direction to the Taotai to inform all the Consuls that H. E. purposes in future to execute all foreigners arrested in the interior in the act of committing offences. This is to give notice that I have laid the said Notification before the Futai, and he expressly and by letter has denied being privy to it. He further declares that none but some one with a mischievous design could have inserted it.

It will be seen that the Futai expressly denies having issued the document we have quoted, as a notification. In this he speaks truth; as it emanated from his office in the form of a despatch. But the evasion will hardly serve him. He has officially announced his intention to act in opposition to treaty stipulations, —in what form the expression of that intention appeared is of little moment.

Summary of the Week.

THE week now closing has passed over without any events more exciting than the continuance of the correspondence between the Futai and the Consuls, relative to Burgevine. In last Saturday's North-China Herald, we gave a copy of the Proclamation offering three thousand Taels for Burgevine's head. We also published the protest made by the Consuls against the right assumed by the Futai of offering rewards for the apprehension of foreigners. As, by a mistake, the British Consul's name was omitted in the signatures affixed to that document, we now reproduce it. We also publish a translation of the Futai's reply. We need not here expatiate on the false reasoning displayed in this reply. In another column the matter will be found discussed.

Another Chinese Notification claims our attention. The translation which will be found in our Editorial columns exhibits plainly that the old spirit of arrogance has not yet died out, and that the Chinese, now feeling themselves growing stronger by their contact with foreigners, endeavour to assert that strength against their protectors. Indeed, Lee Futai is now doing all that could reasonably be expected of the most wily rebel diplomatist, to destroy the friendly feeling existing between the Chinese government and foreign powers.

A Notification issued in Chinese this morning by Mr. Markham, states that the Futai has declined any knowledge of the Proclamation relative to the non-delivery to their Consuls of foreigners caught in the commission of crimes in the interior. On enquiry, we find that this Proclamation formed part of a despatch dated the 4th day of the 6th moon (July 19th). The despatch having come to the knowledge of the conductor of the Chinese paper he thereupon published it, and it appeared under the heading 諭憲 —"Official Notification." At any rate the Chinese Paper is so widely read amongst the native population that the insertion of this Notice must have reached the Futai's ears. That he left it so long unnoticed is to our minds sufficient proof that he was privy to it, and that the Notification did really express his intentions, or was intended as a feeler to see how far he might venture to go.

The proceedings of the Municipal Council published during the past week, have been more generally interesting than the discussions of that body usually are. The subjects of Street Nomenclature and Street Cries were fully ventilated, and the result in both cases will, we doubt not, prove satisfactory to the majority of the foreign residents. The streets are to remain, for the present at least, unaltered in name, and Street Cries are to be abolished. The habit of yelling has, however, come to such a pitch amongst the coolie portion of the population, that we tremble to think of the number of unfortunates who will be "arrested and punished" within the first month after the Regulation comes into force.

The Notification forbidding the continuance of the Cries is as follows:—

THE Secretary of the Municipal Council issues a Notification for general information.

Whether coolies are employed singly or in pairs, they always yell horribly. The row has been heard by this Board, in fact there is never any cessation.

Now, it is positively forbidden that, after the seventeenth day of the seventh month (first September), there shall be any more screaming. Should any be guilty, they will be arrested and punished. They shall not escape.

Proclaimed the——day of the seventh month of the year Kwei-hai.
—day of ——1863.

On the subject of the Bubbling Well Road subscription, a letter from Mr. Pearson, published in our Daily issue of the 27th inst., attempts to controvert a statement made in the last North China Herald. This statement was as follows:—

NEMO and ALIQUIS, too, have written to some purpose, having succeeded in subjecting themselves to a heavy tax for riding and driving on the Bubbling Well Road, which cannot possibly place the slightest check on the annoyances of which they complained, although the trustees intimate that it has been imposed with that object.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.

Mr. Pearson replies that these remarks:—

Are calculated to mislead those who are not acquainted with the circumstances which led to the formation of these roads.

And as an example cites:—

The Community are now subject to a heavy tax for Riding and Driving in consequence of certain letters appearing in the Daily Shipping and Commercial News, wherens &c.

We have before stated that, in our opinion, the imposition of a tax or toll for the privilege of riding and driving on a private road cannot reasonably be made a matter of complaint. We now mention the subject merely to shew that if the Advertisement published in the Daily Shipping News really expresses the ideas of the Road Committee, then our observations were not likely to mislead. The Advertisement commences thus.

In consequence of many complaints of irregularities in Riding and Driving on the Bubbling Well (private) Road, the Committee have found it necessary to frame certain regulations, &c.

And these Regulations, issued "in consequence" of the many complaints, comprise nothing more than the toll tariff, and a reproduction of the Rule of the Road, which the committee can hardly say they made. The facts are patent—a month ago any one could walk on the Road, now the road is only open on payment of a toll; a short time ago, a correspondence appeared relative to the road, and in the advertisement issued by the Committee they distinctly state that this tariff is published in consequence of the complaints made.

A Notification issued by H. B. M. Consul, reiterates the already often repeated caution against British vessels anchoring in face of, or communicating with Nanking. We have so often expressed our opinion as to the merits of the struggle now progressing in China, that any lengthened discussion on freedom of trade with the Rebels would be out of place. We have had ample proof that the love of gain is so deeply rooted in some minds that even the knowledge that the shot and shell supplied to the Rebels by Englishmen were to be hurled with deadly effect against Englishmen, has not prevented many who disgrace the flag which protects them, from supplying the enemies of their countrymen with munitions of war. Were the struggle between Chinaman and Chinaman in far di-tant provinces where our trade would suffer no disturbance, we should rather rejoice over a mutual extermination. But when not only is the Imperial party supported by the English government, but when also English Officers personally engage in the conflict, we do not envy the conscience of a man who sends assistance destined to be used against his own fellow-countrymen. We fear that what right principle has not done, Consular Notifications will not do. Our only trust should be in capturing one of those concerned in the trade and making of him a lasting example.

From Quinsan we have no news of importance. Major Gordon is said to be engaged in clearing the country round between Soochow and his present headquarters. Burgevine's movements are still unknown, whether he has gone to Nanking or whether he has made a circuitous march in hope of decending with effect upon the Ningpo district. We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Loudon who was for some months in command of the Rifles. He was an officer very much liked in the corps, and his bravery and determination had been tried on many occasions. We fear that Major Gordon will find considerable difficulty in supplying his place.

Our Ningpo correspondent informs us that there is at last a chance of the Anglo-Chinese contingent coming in for a share of the prize money resulting from the capture of Shang-yu, Shao-hsing, and Soo-tsan. We understand that the share duly falling to Colonel Cooke's battalion will be something like seventy thousand Taels.

From Hankow and the River Ports, we have no advices of importance. Cholera which paid a flying visit to Hankow and Kiu-kiang has disappeared.

The interest of the week's news centers itself upon Japan. The great fight at Kagosima calls for our first attention. As was stated in our last Summary the fleet, consisting of the Euryalus, Pearl, Argus, Racehorse, Perseus, Coquette and Havoc started from Yokohama on the 6th inst. On the 15th, they arrived opposite Kagosima, and Colonel Neale who accompanied the expedition, sent ashore a copy of his demands on the Prince of Satsuma. After a considerable delay, an answer, unsatisfactory in the extreme, was returned. There was no special declaration of any hostile intention, but the entire document was so ambiguous as to leave no doubt the of Prince's unwillingness to comply with the demands. As a preliminary measure, the Admiral ordered three steamers which the Prince had not long since bought, and which lay concealed in a little bay, to be captured and towed out. This was accordingly done. The Sir George Grey, England and Contest were hailed to the Coquette, Racehorse and Argus respectively.

Some hostile demonstration on the part of the enemy was now awaited. After the lapse of about three hours, a cannonade which we are told, was far hotter than any fire at Sebastopol, was opened upon the Euryalus. The prizes were immediately burned, and the whole fleet went into action. On the first day the fire was well sustained for six hours, but on the second day, (the 16th inst.) two hours were sufficient to complete the destruction of the batteries. The Euryalus suffered very severely. Her Captain and Commander were killed by the same shot. A shell which burst on the main deck killed and wounded twelve men, and wounded Lieutenant Jephson, the officer of the quarters. The casualties in the fleet amount altogether to sixty-three killed and wounded, of which the Euryalus counts thirty. The enemy's batteries numbered ninety guns, many of them of the most formidable dimensions. We need not therefore be surprised at the large number of casualties. Indeed we rather wonder at the Euryalus not having been sunk by the weight of metal hurled upon her. The Euryalus was hulled about ten times, and her spars and rigging are completely cut to pieces. She has with the rest of the fleet returned to Yokohama to refit.

We are informed that the Japanese Admiral and one of his Captains took refuge on board the Euryalus. Their object is stated to be to leave Japan far behind them, and travel to more civilized lands.

At Nagasaki a very severe typhoon had done considerable damage to the shipping. The Prince of Chosew had taken forcible possession of the forts to the South of the straits of Simonoseki, formerly in the possession of the Prince of Kokura. The Vice-Governor of Nagasaki had been dispatched to make enquiries into the matter but had not returned by the 20th instant, up to which our advices extend.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO BURGEVINE.

Shanghae, August 20th, 1863.

To

His Excellency

Lee, Futai, &c., &c., &c.

Sir,—The undersigned Consuls of Treaty and non-Treaty Powers have perused with surprise a notification appearing in the public prints to the effect that your Excellency would reward any person procuring the delivery to you of the body of General Burgevine dead or alive, to the amount of Taels Three Thousand.

The undersigned see in this proposition a direct disregard of Treaty stipulations.

The undersigned are aware that according to American Law the act of General Burgevine in taking up arms for the insurgents is an offense than which none could be greater, but they are also aware that the punishment therefor as provided in the American Treaty, (A) and similarly in all others, can only be inflicted by the Representative of his own Government, and further that were there no Treaties in existence, he ought only be punished according to the rules of civilized warfare.

The undersigned are agreed in saying that as regards General Burgevine, the utmost extent to which you may go, is to procure his arrest, and this is true of the subjects of all Treaty Powers.

We therefore respectfully request and demand that your notification shall be withdrawn or modified accordingly.

The undersigned are agreed further in representing that any course of action towards the subjects of non-Treaty Powers, which does not grant them when taken in arms, the usual privileges of prisoners of war, will go far to alienate from your cause the sympathies of all the Western Nations.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient Servants,

Murder and Insurrection, or rebellion against the Government of these countries are capital offences.

Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That murder and insurrection, or rebellion against the government of either of the said countries, with intent to subvert the same shall be capital offences, punishable with death; but no person shall be convicted of either of said crimes, unless the Consul and his associates in the trial all concur in opinion, and the Minister also approves of the conviction; but it shall always be lawful to convict one put upon trial for either of these crimes, of a lesser offense of a similar character if the evidence justifies it; and when so convicted, to punish as for other offenses, by fine or imprisonment, or both.

Reply.

Lee Footai to the Consul.

We send you a reply. It appears that on the 9th of the present moon you saw in a newspaper a proclamation from us offering Tls 3,000 for the delivery of General Burgevine dead or alive. You were surprised to see it, and thinking you saw in it a direct disregard of the Treaty, asked us to withdraw said proclamation.

Burgevine consented to become a Chinese Mandarin and a General in the army. Having violated Chinese law he should be punished according to the Chinese mode of punishment, which is different from that which your countrymen should receive when they transgress and are sent to their Consul for punishment. Foreigners who have been made Chinese officers and have transgressed Chinese law on Chinese territory, by whom should they be judged? The Treaty does not say. How then say you that we have disregarded the Treaty? Moreover Burgevine's offence is not to be compared with other offences. He having been made a Mandarin of the 3rd grade, and having disobeyed orders, such a transgression is egregious. The Board of Trade and we have treated him leniently out of regard to your country. How is it now that he has the hardihood to join himself to the Rebels, and make himself the enemy of China and all the foreign defence operations? Having become an insurgent we cannot regard him as an American citizen. If you still regard him as such, why wait till he has committed such an offence? If a Chinese go to America and become a citizen and an officer of the army through the favor of the President, then suddenly get up an insurrection, perhaps you would let him have his head! (ironically spoken); could Chinese protect him? Now doctrine is the same in China as in America. In order to maintain peaceful relations you ought to assist us to apprehend him. By no means can you let him do as he please, and defend him in it. Now we have charge of all the military operations in Kiangsoo; to apprehend Burgevine is to apprehend an insurgent.

Now in regard to procuring the arrest of Burgevine, all the Consuls agree in saying that that is the utmost that we can do. Our proclamation spoke only of arresting him, nothing was said as to how he should be judged. In regard to the words "dead or alive", our view was that, perhaps, in apprehending him fighting might be necessary, in which case he might be shot by a gun or a cannon; and we could only bestow the reward in accordance with the language of the proclamation.

Now all the Consuls of the Treaty Powers willingly assist us in protecting this region. At the same time it gives protection to the trade of all the countries interested. The attempt to arrest Burgevine is an effort to give protection to this region, and to all the honest Mercantile Community; this is a benevolent and righteous undertaking. All the countries represented here, desire to be guided by the dictates of reason. It is impossible for them to withdraw their sympathies from us on account of Burgevine's matters. Let your heart be at rest; our proclamation was not adopted to excite surprise, and need not be withdrawn. Hence we write; when this shall arrive you will see.

7th moon, 10th day, (August 23d.)

SUPREME COURT

HONGKONG.

Hanbury versus Pickwoad.

We extract from the Evening Mail the judgment delivered by the acting Chief Justice in the above case; the evidence in which was published in the North-China Herald of the 8th instant.

"This is an action brought by the respondent against the appellant, and was tried in the Consular Court at Shanghae, before Mr. Vice-consul Markham, on the 6th April last. It is alleged in the plaint that the plaintiffs sue the defendant (Hanbury), for that he the said defendant, in or about the month of October, 1862, contracted and agreed to sell to the plaintiff a certain interest in four mow three fun of land situate at Shanghae, for the sum of Tls 5,297.60; and that the plaintiff had always been ready and willing to pay the purchase money, and perform his part of the contract; yet the defendant had refused to execute and perform his part of the same, wherefore the plaintiff claimed damages for breach of the said contract, Taels 3,567.30. The defendant to this plaint, pleads "not indebted"—a plea which, though not in accordance with our system of pleading, leaves open to the defendant every defence of which he could avail himself. Judgment was given in the Consular Court for the amount claimed. The case comes before this Court in appeal, and was very ably argued before me on the 22nd ultimo by Mr. Ballard, on behalf of the appellant, and by the Attorney General on behalf of the respondent. I am of opinion that the judgment of the Consular Court must be affirmed. First, it was contended, on behalf of the appellant, that the verdict was against the evidence, the interest not being in the appellant, but in a third party. To this objection I cannot accede, for I think it clear that Hanbury had, or professed to have (which to render him liable in this action is the same thing), such an interest at the time of the contract, in the property in question, as to enable him to contract for its sale to Pickwoad. Ku Yai, at the time of the contract, appears to have been the owner of the property—that is, the legal owner; but because the legal estate was vested in him (Ku Yai) it by no means follows that Hanbury, having become the purchaser, was not in equity the owner. I apprehend the relationship of trustees and cestui que trust would, under such circumstances, in a qualified sense, subsist between the vendor (Ku Yai) and the purchaser (Hanbury); and if so, the verdict would be as observed by Lord Eldon, in Paine v. Miller, 6 Ver. 349, the premises "would be vendible as his," (that is, as the purchaser's which is the present case) "chargeable as his, capable of being incumbered as his, they might be devised as his, they would be assets, and would de-cend to his heir" (See also the judgment of Kindersley, in Dawson v. Solomon, 29 L.J. Chanc. 129.) But it is said that, after the decision of a Consular Court in a former action between the same parties, the agreement for purchase by Hanbury from Ku Yai was cancelled. I must confess that I am not satisfied with the evidence to that effect, especially as Ku Yai was not called in support of it. But even if it were so, it would not avail, as between the present parties, for it is clear that Pickwoad knew at one time that Hanbury had an equitable interest in the property, and it nowhere appears in the evidence that he had notice of the agreement which constituted him equitable owner having been cancelled. This point therefore, cannot prevail. It is next contended that one Latimer should have been proved as a co-plaintiff. This objection I dismiss, if for no other reason, because it does not appear to have been taken in the Consular Court. Thirdly: it was argued with very great ability by Mr. Pollard, that there was no available contract on which the plaintiff could sue. Upon this point, having regard to the correspondence, the light in which both parties appear to have regarded Mr. Mandeville, the evidence of that gentleman, and indeed, all the circumstances of the case, I find it difficult to free my mind from considerable doubt whether the Vice-consul has arrived at a correct conclusion. At the same time, it must be understood that my state of opinion as to the correctness of the judgment amounts to doubt only. Under these circumstances, my course is clear. "I think it beyond question," said Lord Justice Knight Bruce in The Attorney General v. The Corporation of Beverley 24 L. J. Chanc. 376.) by whose view of the matter I should be bound, even if I did not heartily assent to it, "that it is generally the duty of an Appellate Judge to leave undisturbed a decision of which he does not clearly disapprove. I conceive that, in our Court as in the civil law, it is the rule that "gravely to doubt is to affirm." I affirm the Consular decision upon this point also. The remaining points admit of an easy solution. It was objected in the last place that there was no consideration for the making the contract. This point I notice here in order that it may be, as in fact it is, embraced by the decision which has been pronounced. But it was also urged that the matter had been settled in this Court, when certain questions came before it by way of appeal from the decision of the Consular Court, in a former action between the same parties. But this objection was not put forward with much earnestness by the learned Counsel who argued for the appellant; nor indeed, could it have been, consistently with legal principles, inasmuch as the matter on which the appeal was fixed occurred at a period prior to that which is alleged as the date of the contract. The only remaining point, therefore, for consideration, is the objection that the contract in question, quatenus talent, occured by way of compromise to a matter then in litigation, and which same matter was subsequently decided in favour of the adverse litigant party. Even were this the fact, as affirmed in the proposition, which is by no means clear, the argument raised upon it would, in my judgment, be valueless; inasmuch as whether the arrangement were or were not by way of compromise of a matter in litigation, if there were a contract, and that contract were not rescinded before breach, the party not consenting to the rescision is not bound by it, even though the matter in litigation were subsquently decided in favour of the opposite litigant party.

With respect to the damages, I may here repeat what I have said in a former part of this judgment—and to it may add that, having regard to the situation of the parties, the nature of the case, the value of property in the settlement at any previous time, its increase or decrease in value, as well as to the probabilities or improbabilities attached to my particular circumstances—egress weight must necessarily be given to the judgment of the tribunal which the law has, in the first instance, selected for its decision; and the Court will not disturb a judgment upon questions of such a nature, unless it entertains a clear and strong opinion to the contrary, which in the present instance is not the case. The result, therefore, is, that the judgment of the Consular Court will be affirmed in all points, but I think it is not a case in which the judgment should be affirmed with costs.

INDIA AND CHINA.

(Friend of India.)

One of the most singular features in modern commercial enterprise is the return to the routes adopted by the traders of antiquity. The sudden outburst of discovery in which Portugal and Spain led the way, and the rapid development of the navies of England and Holland in the days of the Tudors, gave the sea not only a pre-eminence but a monopoly in the carriage of goods. The rich republics of the middle ages, which had succeeded to the wealth of the oriental trade brought overland by Solomon and the successors of Alexander, sank into ruin, while the maritime states of Eastern Europe superseded them. But the progress of mechanical science and the competition of modern commerce have driven England to the old overland highway of the ancients, and France to the attempted peace canal. The Cape route is fallen into desuetude. Even Indian troops are to be sent through Egypt. The close of the year will see a telegraph down the Euphrates valley communicating with Calcutta and ultimately with Pekin. In less than a quarter of a century by the Oxus or Euphrates or both, a railway will convey passengers from England to India with ease in ten days.

The last illustration of this tendency to return to the old land route of our remote ancestors, is seen in the projects for speedy communication between India and China. Along the track by which Buddhism travelled from its original seat, the now extinct Kapila north of Goruckpore, to Nankin, at by a land route to the south of this, India must in process of time communicate China. In the beginning of the fifth century Fa-Hian with several companions journeyed from China by the north of the modern Lhassa to Oudh and Mughada, which is modern Behar south of the Ganges. He sailed down that river to Tumlook, and, while he went home by sea in order to visit Ceylon, his companions returned by land. Two hundred years after, Hwan Tsang followed his example, taking a route through Central Asia still more to the north, and entering India through the Punjab. Now it is folly to suppose that with a break of only two hundred miles between our frontier town of Sudya, to which a steamer sailed in the dry season, and the Yangtse-Kiang, India will, in these days of the discovery of the Nile source, continue wearily to send her steamers down the bay of Bengal, round the Malayan Peninsula and up through the most dangerous seas in the world to the mouth of Yang-tsze. In their way all the chief authorities of Northern and Eastern India are at work on the subject of profitable commercial land routes to China. First, and most difficult of all, is the plan of Sir Robert Montgomery, to enrich the Punjab and Kurrachee by a commercial route through Cashmere and its dependency of Ladak. Second, the Government of India are committed to Lord Dalhousie's road, about to be finished, from Simla to Chinee and the frontier of Thibet. Third, and as is usual with the Bengal Government, most backward of all, is the projected road from Darjeeling to Lhassa, which the Sikkim Rajah has just offered to assist us in making, and which we hope to see begun in the cold season. Fourth and quite as backward, is what we believe will ultimately prove the most speedy route, up the Berhampooter to Sudya and thence to the Yangtsze-Kiang, for which nothing has been done. Fifth, there is the much talked of route from Rangoon up the Irrawady to Bhamo and Yunan, where our consular agent Dr. Williams has just been. Sixth, and last, there is the route from Moulmain up the Salween through the Shan country, to Esmok in Yunan or Kiang Hung on the great Cambodia river at the mouth of which the French have settled. We do not reckon the scheme of Captain Forlong for a canal or railway at the isthmus of Kraw to cut off the detour caused to ships by the Malayan Peninsula, for its utility is in inverse ratio to its expense.

Of these routes two fall under the jurisdiction of Colonel Phayre, C. B., as Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and he is devoting all his energies to secure a survey of that up the Salween to which Captain Sprye has given some notoriety by his proposed railway. In a most clear and convincing letter to one of the Rangoon papers he confirms the opinion we had always expressed of Captain Sprye's railway—that that projector's data are imaginary and his main design at present impracticable. But it is to persistent men of one idea like Captain Sprye that the world is often indebted for its greatest benefits, and Colonel Phayre recommends, as we have so often done, a survey of the route. The first part of the work has been already sanctioned by the Government of India in the expedition next December of Lieutenants Scence and Watson. But this is of only local importance to Tenasserim. What is wanted is a survey of Captain Sprye's whole route from Sliway Gyeen to Kiang Hung on the Cambodia, showing the nature of the country, and the probable amount and flow of trade in Yunan, North, in Siam and Cochin China. A Geologist and Zoologist, a Surveyor, and a Political Officer like Lieutenant Watson, would in the course of twelve months open out to the world an undiscovered country on our very borders, and prove whether Hongkong and Shanghai, or Moulmein and Rangoon, are the natural outlets for the trade of two provinces which Colonel Phayre admits to contain thirty-eight millions of people, while the rest other provinces of Western China are inhabited by fifty-four millions.

Lord Elgin and Sir F. Bruce have, with what we cannot but think an excess of prudence hardly becoming the latter who lately explored Mongolia, objected to Captain Smyth entering Thibet even on his own charges. Surely, if Lord Elgin means to keep his promise to the Royal Geographical Society, he will not stop this expedition, when Colonel Phayre guarantees its probable safety. For it is not only trade and science which are interested in it. Colonel Phayre, who is the first living authority on the Indo-Chinese countries, asserts, that however visionary Captain Sprye's railway project may be, his proposal of an electric telegraph from Rangoon to Canton is "worthy of support" and "practicable at an outlay comparatively small." The line would run, in continuation of the Indian system now extended to the frontier, to Esmok, Canton, Hongkong, and up the coast to Shanghai and Pekin. Our merchants in China are sure to assist it eagerly. Lord Elgin has too much experience of both India and China not to support it. The Persian Gulf cable is to be laid in the autumn and would form the only sea portion from Pekin to Calais. If the proposed expedition were at once sanctioned and the support of Sir F. Bruce and the Foreign Office obtained, there is no reason why the end of 1864 should not see Pekin and Shanghai, and ultimately our Japanese ports, in instant communication with Calcutta and London. Surely the difficulties of the five hundred miles east of Sliway Gyeen to Canton are less than on the Mekran Coast where we have already laid down three hundred miles of wire. Political events too sadly teach us at present the danger of depending on Russia for our China intelligence, any more than on America for communication with our colonies on the Pacific.
